

New T. & D. Theater Opened in Oakland

Adding the thirty-first link to a chain of motion picture theaters, the T. & D. Junior Enterprises last night opened the New Palace theater at Twenty-third avenue and East Fourteenth street with Theodore Roberts in "Grumpy" following a program inside the new theater of speakers from both the city and county governments and a regular old time street carnival for the benefit of the entire district.

Commissioner W. J. Moorehead, representing Mayor John L. Davie, was one of the speakers. The county board of supervisors was represented and Clement Miller, secretary of the Twenty-third Avenue Improvement Association, spoke.

Grant Miller, county coroner and head of the Eastbay Safety Council, made a short address. Among the other speakers were R. A. McNeil, Charles Moser and Mort Thomas, all of the T. & D. Junior Enterprises.
