

On the mezzanine floor of the Chateau - Dodge. Adaptation of the motif to the walls here is notable.

The Chateau-Dodge from the street. The exterior is "standard" -rural France lying just beyond the entrance.

In the auditorium—a view from the balcony. Here the little French town is a dominating influence, being adapted even to the seats. The ceiling is vaulted and bears light clouds.

The Chateau-Dodge Interprets Rural France

Inspired in its design by the French village, Finkelstein & Ruben's new Chateau-Dodge in Rochester, Minn., is the first atmospheric theatre in the Northwest. The cost was half a million.
